INTRODUCTION

The International Conference on Translation (ICT) is a biennial conference. It was first held in 1984 through the initiative of the Malaysian Translators Association (PPM) and the Dewan Bahasa dan Pustaka (DBP) with the aim to increase awareness on the importance of translation in the quest for knowledge transfer.

Translation is a major communication tool for building a nation, society and religion not only in Malaysia, but throughout the world especially in the era of globalization and the world without borders. Hence, the objective of holding an international conference is to foster the exchange of ideas, knowledge, experiences, and at the same time strengthen cooperation among academicians, linguists, translators, authors, publishers, editors, educators and students around the world to review new knowledge, theories and techniques in the field of translation in order to improve the quality of translation as a whole. Since the fourth International Translation Conference in 1993, the National Translation Institute of Malaysia (ITNM), now known as the Malaysian Institute of Translation and Book (ITBM), was also invited as co-organizer of the conference. Starting from the second conference, higher learning institution have taken turns as the host of the conference. In 2019, Faculty of Major Language Studies, Universiti Sains Islam Malaysia (USIM) becomes the host for the 17th International Conference on Translation (ICT).
